"Don Jenaro started to spring at him, but the others restrained him. Soon calming himself, he said:

"'If you are so brave, why not put your hand on the table?'
"'What for?'

"'To pin it down with mine." "The Englishman, without an instant's hesitation, stretched out his huge, brawny hand. The count took out of his pocket a damaskeened dagger and laid his delicate, gentlemanly hand on the Englishman's, and without hesitation and with a ferceious grip he raised the point with the other and drove it through both into the table.

'The women uttered a cry of terror. All of us men ran to their assistance. A few left the place in search of help. In an instant our booth was filled with blood. From the wounds great drops of blood streamed, staining the handkerchiefs which we applied to them.

A Monte Carlo Tragedy.

Mr. Poppe of Germany, with his wife and a friend, went to Monte Carlo recently to win a fortune on a sure system of betting devised by the friend. They lost $2,000, and determined to mit snieide. The three sat on the beach at Antibes, then walked into the water up to their necks; each held a revolver and at a word from Poppe held it to his head and fired. The Poppes were killed instantly, but the friend
